Avaada Foundation, the philanthropic wing of Avaada Group, is making transformative contributions across 15 states in India, focusing on education, empowerment, youth development, environment, health and energy.

“The foundation supports education by renovating government schools, offering scholarships to deserving underprivileged students, and supplying smart boards and other resources. It also provides transportation for girls and establishes centers in remote areas for educational and development programs, including digital learning centres, spoken English classes, motivational speeches, entrepreneurship workshops and career counseling,” shared a spokesperson, adding, “In healthcare, Avaada Foundation played a crucial role during the COVID-19 pandemic, setting up hospitals and providing 24/7 community health emergency transport in Rajasthan. The organization also offers free health checkups, medicine, and first aid training, promoting overall community health and wellness.”

For youth development, the foundation builds sports fields and supplies sports materials to schools. It also empowers women through gadget-handling training and job opportunities in various fields. “The foundation is committed to sustainable energy initiatives, installing solar plants in remote villages and schools. It also fights hunger by distributing ration bags and fosters environmental health through a significant tree plantation drive, planting and tending to over one lakh trees using Miyawaki’s technique. With its continuous efforts, it is dedicated to building a brighter, equitable future for all in India,” added the spokesperson of the foundation.
